Introduction

This memorandum gives some basic information about MGMT 714 as it will go on in the Spring term of 2013 (2013A). The then-current syllabus given below will be circulated in the opening class and its contents will be open for discussion there and via email over the following several days. A finalized syllabus will then be circulated to all enrolled students and posted on the course website.

This course concerns the evolution of the institutions of business. There will be some sidelong glances abroad, though these will be mostly in the beginning and at the end. In the main body of the course, focus will be on the American history. In this, there will be both big picture and (quite a lot of) industry and firm detail. The focus will be much more on actual business administration than on the great sweep of American economic development and its social context in the background. (For a highly complementary course focused on that, see Profesor Licht’s “Industrializing America” course in the History Department.) In terms of the functional courses in the Wharton core curriculum (accounting, finance, operations, marketing, etc.), the perspective of this course is fairly synthetic. It is about the operation of whole enterprises, then, now, and into the future. Wharton and other undergraduates contemplating work for consulting firms may find this useful background.

The course’s most overt structure is chronological. That narrative starts in eighteenth-century Philadelphia and will run this year up through the current struggles between Amazon, Apple, and Google. The course’s deeper preoccupations are how industries develop, how individual firms create, nurture, and sustain viable competitive positions, and how larger environmental changes affect these processes and activities. The historical episodes are chosen to be vivid and thought provoking; but the course as a whole is about far more than history.

I will inevitably have to lecture about some of the material; but as much as possible, I want to run the class sessions in discussion format. I am organizing readings I hope will support and facilitate this. My hope is that students in the course will play an active role in the classroom. It is much more fun for everyone that way.

The course will meet in a double session on Tuesday afternoons from 3 pm to 5:40 pm (or so sometimes, but even when running long ending comfortably before 6). We are currently scheduled to meet in Huntsman 345. The audience will be a mixture of undergraduates, MBA’s, and in some semesters the occasional Law student. The readings are chosen, and the discussions run, so as to maximize the likelihood that everyone will have a reasonable opportunity to contribute.

Readings, memoranda, and important announcements will be posted on a course webpage accessible to those registered for the course. There will be no readings assigned for either the first or the last session.

The formal requirements of the course are as follows. Students will be expected to (1) prepare all the assigned readings, (2) write one brief “thought paper” responding to some aspect of the readings each week, submitting it prior to class, (3) attend all classes, (4) participate in class discussion, and (5) write a term paper and submit it at the beginning of the final class. I give more detail on some of these below and will discuss all of these in the first class.

The basis for grade assignment will be a 35-65 weighted average of marks for class participation (which will be sensitive to the quality of the thought papers if they are out of the ordinary) and on the term paper. These scores will be ordered. Conditional on responsible preparation and attendance, individuals’ grades will be assigned on the basis of position in that order and the standard curve of the student’s home School at Penn (Wharton, SAS, Engineering, etc.). If any student’s home School has absolute rather than relative grading standards, as is the case for Wharton undergraduates, these will be honored. In the I hope unlikely event that an individual’s preparation or attendance seem less than responsible, the grade will be adjusted appropriately.

I do understand that emergencies do happen sometimes in life. I will make reasonable accommodation on preparation and attendance requirements for specific classes in specific cases. Please be in touch in advance via raff@wharton.upenn.edu.

“Thought papers” are 1-2 pp. (at the very most 3 pp.) essays responding analytically or critically to some element of the week’s reading. (Comparisons, contrasts, or other relationships between readings—either within one week or between weeks—are also fine. The main point of the exercise is just to work out some thinking about the readings in writing prior to class discussion.) These are to be submitted via the website prior to noon on the day of class.

Writing the thought papers may seem in the abstract like a burden. In many jobs into which Wharton (and, indeed, Penn B.A.) graduates move from here, however, the ability to write two-page analytical memo’s under heavy deadline pressure fluently and without much stress is extremely valuable. Neither our program (nor, in general, the American educational system) gives students much practice at this. It is a very useful skill.

The basic idea for the term paper is that it should be about a course-relevant topic of interest to you but pre-approved by me. The point of the pre-approval requirement is simply to warn you about topics that might look initially appealing but seem, on the basis of my prior experience, likely either not to have enough material to sustain a whole paper or to prove overwhelming once you get down to work. (I want writing the paper to be a good experience in its substance and a manageable one in terms of its time demands.) I have in mind papers roughly 20 pp. in length. I should perhaps say what “roughly” means. In the past, papers shorter than 15 pp. have pretty consistently not seemed to get to grips with their subjects. Papers longer than 25 pp. have generally seemed unedited, though there have been some exceptions (the best of which I would have been happy to show to the Dean or, come to that, the Provost.) I will give more details about suitable topics and framing in the opening class and will post them in memo form on the course webpage.

I hope to organize a series of group lunch dates and would very much like to have lunch with everyone relatively early on.

If questions, remain in your mind after reading this memo, by all means email me at the address given above and ask.
