OVERVIEW: This course studies business ethics within a global economy. Its aims to sharpen your appreciation of the moral complexity business decision-makers confront when working across borders and to explore rival decision-making frameworks. The course encourages critical analysis of arguments concerning the right course of action for individuals and economic enterprises in a wide variety of cases. Among the ideas and issues discussed: relativism, corporate governance, responsibilities to shareholders, competitive advantage, intellectual property rights and human rights, community, reparations, biopiracy, corruption, exploitation.

CLASS PARTICIPATION: Students are expected to complete the reading before class and to actively participate in classroom discussion. Material is covered in each class that is not available in the readings. Much of the most important learning will come not directly from lectures or readings, but through reflection on your behavior and that of your classmates as you participate in simulations and discuss cases. Consequently, you should miss class only for an extraordinary reason. Absences will be reflected in grades. An attendance sheet will be circulated.

EXAMS: There will be a graded midterm testing your understanding of cases, exercises, other reading material, and class discussion. There will be a pass/fail exercise near the end of term that serves to make sure you keep up with the reading. There will also be a final writing assignment, which must be submitted no later than the date of our final. Details will follow.

GROUP PROJECTS: After the midterm, the class will be divided into teams of 3-5 students each. Teams will participate in a debate. Each debate will focus on an assigned topic and each team will defend a different view. Teams will prepare a 4-5 page paper describing its position and outlining its case for it. A copy of this paper should be provided to the opposing team at least twenty-four hours prior to the debate. Each team will make an argument for its position and a rebuttal of the opposing team’s argument. This will be followed by questions from the audience. More details will follow.

GRADES: The midterm is worth 25%; the group project is worth 20%; the writing assignment is worth 55%; students must pass the end-of-term exercise. Students may substantially improve their grades through informed class participation.
READINGS AND MATERIALS: Unless indicated otherwise, all readings are found on study.net.

CLASSROOM ETIQUETTE: Students are expected to treat one another with respect, and students are expected to arrive on time. Cell phones, computers and other electronic devices must be turned off. No typing or texting is permitted in class.
