Course objectives

The purpose of this course is to allow students and faculty to expose their work to others, receive feedback and foster knowledge diffusion. This course offers:

1. In-depth discussion of important topics in marketing by PhD students and faculty;
2. Exposure to tools and methodologies required for conducting research in those areas;
3. Exposure to various marketing faculty, research styles, and presentation styles;
4. The opportunity to experience on-going research being presented and discussed, rather than just experiencing finished-and-polished research products through manuscripts or publications.

Prerequisites

Having taken, or be taking concurrently, MKTG 942/943 (Research Methods) or similar graduate-level courses.

Course format

The course is a half-credit course meeting throughout the fall semester on Thursdays from 12:00 pm -1:20 pm. Most meetings will take place in the Department's conference room (JMHH 741).

The format is that of a seminar or workshop, discussing on-going and other yet-unpublished research.

The focus of each meeting is a research presentation by a different faculty member or PhD student at Wharton or another academic/research institution and may include some doctoral student speakers. The great majority of guests will be from marketing academia, but a few may be from other areas, like psychology, communications, neuro science, operations, economics, IS/CS, or analytics.

Grading

Students will be evaluated on the quality of their work presented and contributions during the seminar /workshop sessions. Attendance is required.

Registration
