Research shows that many individuals are profoundly underinformed about important financial facts and financial products, which frequently lead them to make mistakes and lose money. Moreover, consumer finance comprises an enormous sector of the economy, including products like credit cards, student loans, mortgages, retail banking, insurance, and a wide variety of retirement savings vehicles and investment alternatives. Additionally, recent breakthroughs in the FinTech arena are integrating innovative approaches to help consumers. Though virtually all people use these products, many find financial decisions to be confusing and complex, rendering them susceptible to fraud and deception. As a result, government regulation plays a major role in these markets.

This course intended for Penn undergraduates considers economic models of household decisions and examines evidence on how consumers are managing (and mismanaging) their finances. Although academic research has historically placed more attention on corporate finance, household finance is receiving a brighter spotlight now— partly due to its role in the recent financial crisis. Thus the course is geared toward those seeking to take charge of their own financial futures, anyone interested in policy debates over consumer financial decision making, and future FinTech entrepreneurs.

The course includes assigned readings, class discussion, and homework assignments. Many of the homeworks will require empirical analysis, and we will also spend some class time discussing statistical tools and data sources. During the semester, each student will choose a research topic to explore in a short (10 p) term paper. A draft will be due October 29, which we will promptly return with comments, giving students time to revise their work; class presentations will be in early December.

Course Structure and Requirements. This cross-listed course is co-taught by Professors Mitchell and Roussanov. There are two midterm exams and no final exam. There are also weekly assignments which must be handed in; each student must submit individual answers to assignments via Canvas. Final grades are determined by the two midterm exams (50%), assignments (30%), and projects/class presentations (20%).

Prerequisites. There are no formal prerequisites for the class but students are assumed to have an introductory knowledge of economics and statistics. A special section on statistics will be offered to those needing help with basic concepts.

Faculty: You may schedule meeting times with the professors via email.
Prof. Olivia S. Mitchell: mitchelo@wharton.upenn.edu
Professor Nick Roussanov: nroussan@wharton.upenn.edu

Add/Drop Deadline. As per Wharton policy, you may drop the course until the official drop date (see https://almanac.upenn.edu/penn-academic-calendar#row-115). After the drop deadline, you need written permission from an instructor to drop the course. It is the policy of the course instructors that we do not sign petitions to drop the course after the official drop date. Please refer to the following link for more information: https://undergrad-inside.wharton.upenn.edu/withdrawing/

Withdrawal Deadline. As per UPenn policy, the formal withdrawal deadline will be announced at https://almanac.upenn.edu/penn-academic-calendar#row-115. Also as per UPenn policy, after the 10th week of the semester, withdrawals are not normally permitted.
Expectations. Students must become familiar with and adhere to the Penn Code of Academic Integrity and Code of Student Conduct (https://catalog.upenn.edu/pennbook/code-of-academic-integrity/). Class attendance and punctuality are expected. Students are asked to use laptop computers exclusively for taking notes; other uses for electronic devices during class are prohibited.

Course Electronic Device Policy. Experience has shown that use of the use of electronic devices during any class for non-educational purposes significantly disrupts learning for the students using the device and for others in the class. Accordingly, the following policies should be observed with penalties set by the instructor as deemed appropriate:

• Phones must be turned off and put away. If a student must keep a phone on by reason of a personal emergency, the student must inform the instructor before class begins.
• The use of laptops and tablets is not allowed unless for educational purposes as permitted by the instructor (e.g., note taking, reading, or data analysis).

Missing an Exam. Students may miss scheduled examinations only with a University-approved excuse. Examples of such valid excuses include direct conflicts with another course offered at Penn that cannot be rescheduled as well as a varsity (but not club) sport competition (but not training). In particular, job interviews and vacations are not a legitimate reason to miss an exam. Missing an exam without a University-approved excuse will result in a zero for the exam. Arriving late to an exam will be treated as missing an exam.

Exam Regrades. To submit a regrade request for an exam, you must submit your original test answers, a signed regrade affidavit (see the course Canvas for the template), and a written memorandum explaining why you think that the exam should be regraded. This request must be submitted within 5 business days after the graded examination papers have been made available for pickup. Your entire exam will then be reviewed, and your grade may go down, go up, or remain unchanged at the prerogative of the professor for the module. You must not mark, make notes on, or alter the exam papers for which you seek a regrade; any such alteration will be seen as a violation of the Code of Academic Integrity and you will receive an automatic failing grade for the course.
